Campus Library provides program and academic research support to college and university students, staff, and faculty.

The library features include wireless access throughout the building, seating for 600 patrons, over 130 public access work-stations with Internet access and a TV/DVD/VHS Viewing Room. Student spaces include a rotunda with soft seating and a fireplace, two silent study areas, group study rooms, a Library Den for casual use and library instructional classrooms.

Campus Library serves the information needs of students, faculty, and staff related to teaching, learning, and research. A major emphasis is on providing exceptional instructional opportunities to promote critical informational learning skills.

Other services include Interlibrary loan (ILL) services, reserve reading, assistance with copyright, plagiarism and citation styles, as well as, walk-in and remote access to the collection.

The Dixon-Alger Fireside Reading Room on the second floor houses current issues of periodicals, DVDs and a paperback collection for leisure reading.

Back-issues of periodicals are located on the shelves to the west of the elevators. Most of the library’s periodical collection is accessible online in electronic format.

Three of the Group Study Rooms are located on the second floor. Students may reserve these rooms online, by selecting the “Book a Study Room” option on the library website. Rooms may be reserved for a maximum of four hours per day, by two or more students.

The general collection book stacks with call numbers from A-QA are located on this floor.
